Apparatus

11-15 Boulter, C.A. & Scolaro, A.B.
Duplicating homogeneous strain on a closed-circuit television system
18-20 Powell, W.E.
Rocks and minerals as a viable course in the undergraduate curriculum
34-37 Wallace, W. J.
Seiche measurement
45 Leming, C.W.
Growing crystals on the ceiling (Letter)
56-59 Laznicka, Peter
A rock encyclopedia that includes rock samples
64-68 Zaffo, P.A.
Production of artificial lightning in an ordinary clear light bulb
71-73 Spicer, C.A.
Conducting a fire assay for school children
87-88 Kroll, R.L.
Introducing the use of x-ray diffraction and computers in mineralogy
105-106 Kopp, O.C.
108-113 Cathodoluminescence petrography - a valuable tool for teaching and research
168 Effing, M.C.
Measuring the earth's radius with a laser
176-179 Arrigoni, E.
Diamond Head revisited with ammonium dichromate
233-235 Dutch, S.I.
A computer program for crystal drawing

Economic geology - nonmetals

Education

160-168 Corgan, J.X.
Geology in Tennessee colleges 1826 - 1850
189-191 Picard, M.D.
An earthquake, a landslide, a grandma
255-256 Picard, M.D.
R.L. Brown: science teacher

Education - competency based

Education - elementary

76-82 Stallings, E.S., Astwood, P.M., Carpenter, J.R., and Fitzpatrick, Henry B.
Effects of two contrasting teaching strategies in an investigative earth science course for elementary-education majors

Education - graduate

26-30 Stewart, D.C.
Competing needs and conflicting solutions for graduate training in environmental geology
169-175 Norris, R.M.
Early geologic education in California — Berkeley and Stanford show the way
180-183 Steinker, D.C.
A course in research and writing for graduate students in geology
184-185 Thornton, S.E.
Origin of new faculty in sedimentary petrology at Ph.D.-granting universities in the United States and Canada
228-232 Rossiter, M.W.
Geology in Nineteenth-Century women's education in the United States

Education - science

73 Lincoln, C.E.
Food for Thought
139 Singer, B., and Benassi, V.A.
Food for Thought
154 Christman, R.
Cutbacks in federal support of science education (letter)
154 Agnew, J.D.
